Current Housing Stock & Households

South Hero has 1,096 housing units. South Hero's housing stock is comprised primarily of single-unit detached homes, the majority of which were built between 1960 and 1999. Approximately 163 units have been permitted in the past 20 years. These permitted units are overwhelmingly single-unit detached dwellings with just 2% of all permits being for multi-unit developments. It is important to note that not all permitted units may have been constructed. In 2022, the Bayview Crossing senior apartment complex opened. This complex has 30 units and includes a mix of market-rate and affordable units.

85% of South Hero's year-round occupied housing units are owner-occupied, while 15% are renter-occupied.

Seasonal Housing & Short-Term Rentals

Roughly 35% of South Hero's housing stock is used seasonally, which is defined by the Census as units that are lived in less than half the year. According to the Grand List, over 90% of seasonal units have lake frontage. The number of seasonal units has grown by 9% over the last 10 years.

In recent years, the number of short-term rentals has increased across the state of Vermont. Short-term rentals are properties rented for 30 days or less. In South Hero up to 2% of units are used as whole house short-term rentals. Respondents to the Town Plan Survey were divided on whether or not the Town should implement specific regulations for short-term rentals. The plurality were unsure, while a third opposed restrictions and 20% supported restrictions.

Homeownership

The median sale price of a home in South Hero has increased 74% from 2015 to 2021.

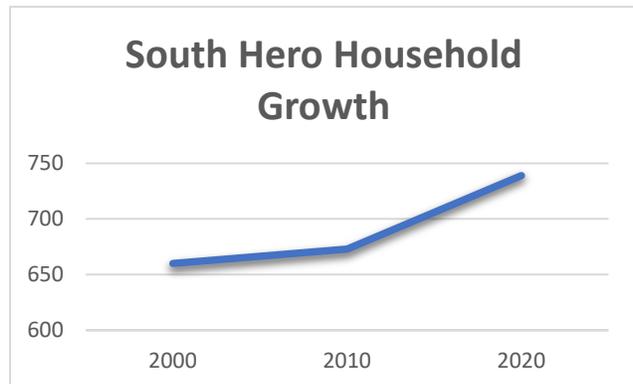

Homeownership is extremely unaffordable for households making the median incomes for the MSA. A household would need an income of almost $140,000 to afford the median home in South Hero. Almost ¼ of current South Hero homeowners pay more than 30% of their income on housing. Senior homeowners were more likely to find housing unaffordable.

Many South Hero residents are concerned about the impact of high housing prices. In an open-ended survey question about the impact of the increased prices of housing in South Hero common themes included concerns that only wealthy households would be able to afford to live in South Hero, that South Hero locals would be priced out, and that workers and young people would be priced out. Only 7% of respondents did not feel that price increases had an impact on the community. Roughly 30% of respondents were unsatisfied with current housing options in South Hero.

Future Housing Needs

While the population of South Hero is relatively stagnant, the number of households has continued to increase over the last 20 years due to the trend of smaller households. If household sizes continue to get smaller, there will be a need for new housing units even if population remains similar. In South Hero many of these new smaller households are senior households, with the number of residents over the age of 65 nearly doubling in the last 10 years. Many of these households would likely prefer smaller, more affordable housing units that are easily accessible to services and community spaces.

Demand for seasonal housing also continues to increase in South Hero. The percentage of seasonal units has increased 9% in the last 10 years. Having a high percentage of seasonal units can have both positive and negative impacts for a community. Seasonal units can provide a tax benefit to the Town, as seasonal residents pay property taxes but utilize fewer municipal services. However, strong seasonal demand may also lead to higher housing costs that can price out year-round residents.

There is also a need for more affordable housing options in South Hero. Low-income households are unlikely to find any affordable housing option in South Hero, and even those making above median incomes may be unable to afford homeownership.

To meet future housing needs, the Town will need to move away from

Equity and Housing

Having a broad range of housing options at all price points can support an equitable and inclusive community. When housing options are unaffordable, those with median or low incomes are shut out of the community. Municipal regulations can contribute to this problem by creating unnecessary barriers to housing types other than single-unit structures.

the current development pattern of almost entirely large lot single unit houses. Meeting housing demand with exclusively this type of development will lead to sprawl and will not address the affordability issues. Smaller units, multi-unit structures, accessory dwelling units and mobile homes can all provide more affordable options. For instance, adding an accessory dwelling unit to an existing home provides a new rental unit and can reduce the housing costs for the homeowner.

Municipal regulations and policy play a major role in determining the location, density type and amount of housing available in South Hero. The Town has identified South Hero Village and Keeler Bay Village as an appropriate place for denser housing development and should consider how best to reduce regulatory barriers to appropriately scaled residential development in these areas. Investments into infrastructure, such as community wastewater, can also support denser residential development.
